Changing Times Chandeliers

Main Street U.S.A.

I FOUND IT!

Osiurn "Osh" Popham founded his modest Emporium on Main Street U.S.A. in 1863, when gas light fixtures were all the rage with their upward-facing lamps. As his store expanded and grew more prosperous, he added new chandeliers to his additions that were wired for electricity but also retained some upward-facing gas lamps due to the unreliability of electric lights. Finally, in 1901, Osh expanded his store one final time to include the Emporium Gallery, this time installing all-electric downward-facing lights in a sweeping Edwardian style in vogue in Europe at the time. As you tour the Emporium, enjoy your walk through time and note each kind of chandelier! Side note: Osh Popham was a character (played by Burl Ives) in the Disney movie "Summer Magic" from 1963, and you can often hear the song "Flitterin'" from this feature film in the background music on Main Street.

There are two buildings on Main Street USA that do not use the 1-7/8 - 1/2 scale forced perspective. One is Tony's Town Square restaurant building, which needs to be tall enough to block the view of the Contemporary while in the parks and was therefore built with all its floors true-to-size. Another is the Town Square Firehouse, which stands a full three stories because the original plans for the parks included an apartment for Walt's family like its counterpart in Disneyland. As you may know, Walt sadly passed away before the opening of Walt Disney World, which made the apartment unnecessary. But as construction was already underway, the building was completed full-scale.

Land Survey Marker

Main Street U.S.A. Castle Hub

I FOUND IT!

These round metal markers with a global symbol and Mickey ears are what surveyors use when plotting infrastructure and utilities. They can be found in all of the Disney parks! Historically, Disney also used the top of Cinderella's castle as a triangulation point because it could be seen from any location and had an established elevation.

The footman's face is Imagineer Herb Ryman, who designed both Sleeping Beauty Castle in Disneyland and Cinderella Castle in WDW. The man standing directly behind him is a caricature of Imagineer and animator John Hench, who designed many attractions including Space Mountain and New Orleans Square, and who was also the official portrait artist of Mickey Mouse. While you're there, have a quick peek at Anastasia and Drizella... they are green with envy and red with anger, respectively.

A Solid Wood Horse

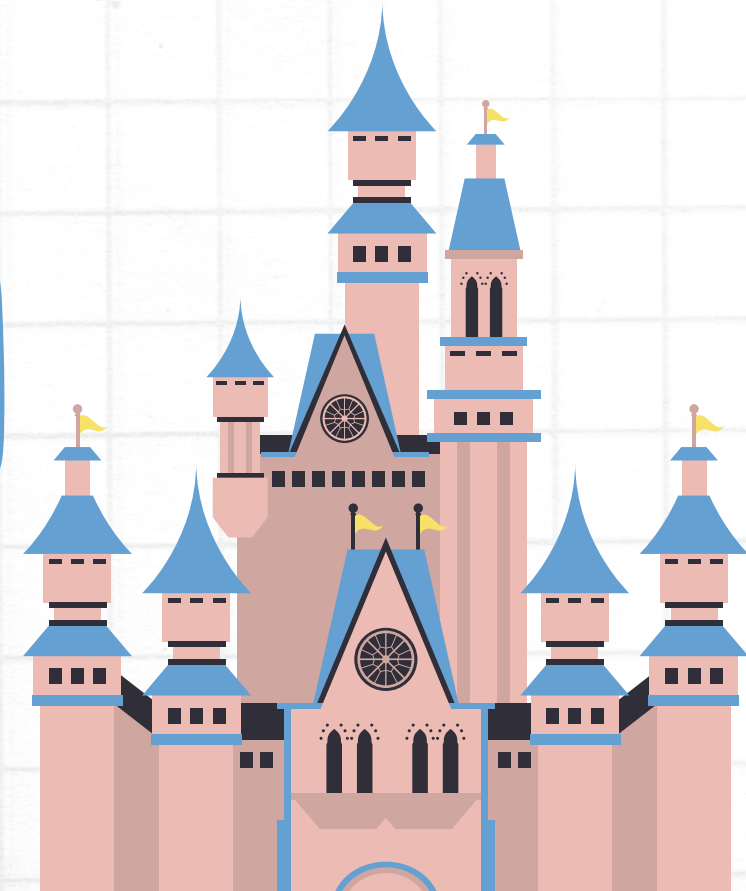

Prince Charming Regal Carrousel

I FOUND IT!

Some of the horses on this 1917 "Liberty Carrousel" are made from solid maple wood, and some are fiberglass replicas. Find an original by giving the horse a gentle thump!

6 Peanuts, Shells, and Horseshoe Prints

Fantasyland

I FOUND IT!

Disney often embeds objects and prints into the ground to create atmosphere and add to the story. So keep looking down, you never know what you might find! While you're at it, enjoy the resilient asphalt below your feet... it's a blend of asphalt concrete and rubber that helps fight fatigue and aching joints and is found all over the Disney parks!

You can find a nod to the now-extinct 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea submarine ride in these two locations. The tree itself used to be the centerpiece of a Pooh play area which used to sit on top of where the lagoon from the submarine ride used to be. The tree was relocated in the Fantasyland remodel, but this relic remains. There is also a similar Nautilus in the rock work of Under the Sea - Journey of the Little Mermaid, which currently stands in the site of the old lagoon (and is why the queue was designed with water as the centerpiece!)

8 Hidden Mickeys

Seven Dwarves Mine Train

I FOUND IT!

Look for a hidden mickey in the queue wall, and another one behind one of the dwarf's heads in the mine, created by three diamonds. You may also notice the vultures look extra menacing... that's because they were repurposed from the now-defunct Snow White's Scary Adventures ride, and are not to scale with the rest of the ride's characters. The scene at the end of the attraction is also all repurposed from that original attraction.

Kepple was the name of Walt's great-great-grandfather, born in 1776 in Ireland. Liberty Square itself is a progression through time, beginning in the 1770s at the Haunted Mansion and progressing all the way around the Rivers of America to Big Thunder Mountain Railroad, ending in the 1880s.

10 "Two, If By Sea" Lanterns

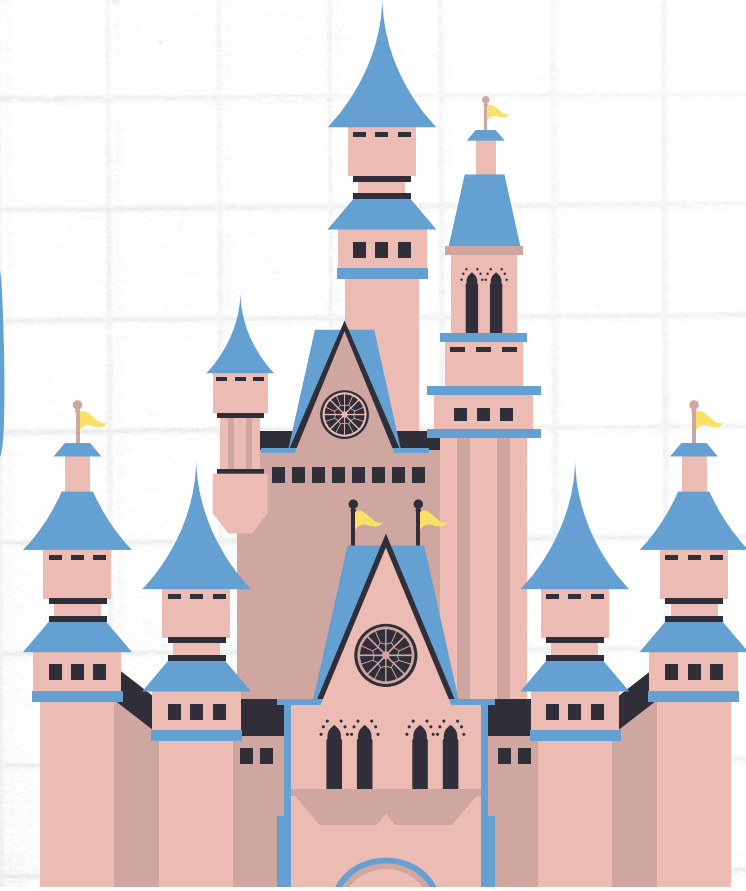

Liberty Square

I FOUND IT!

From the famous Longfellow poem describing Paul Revere's midnight ride, two lanterns can be spotted in an upper window. This was a failsafe signal placed in the window of Boston's Old North Church in case Paul Revere did not successfully deliver his message, and it remains a stalwart reminder of when the British came by sea.

13 Colony Lanterns

Liberty Square

I FOUND IT!

The Liberty Tree is a symbol of freedom for the early colonists, and at 38 tons and over 100 years old, it's the largest living thing in the Magic Kingdom. 13 lanterns can be found here, each symbolizing one of the original 13 colonies. While you're at it, have a look at the Liberty Bell replica, created from the same casting as the original Liberty Bell.

Look closer at the American flags in Liberty Square... none of them are actual current American flags. The reason is there are laws about what you can do and not do with a real American flag, like when you need to lower it to half-mast or retire it at the end of the day. To get around this, Disney has made each decorative flag not a true American flag so they can fly them as they like. The only real American flag flying in the parks in the one you see when you first enter the park.

Beacon Joe

Pirates of the Caribbean, Haunted Mansion, & Liberty Belle Riverboat

I FOUND IT!

The Imagineers used the same audio-animatronics character for multiple attractions to save from reinventing the wheel, so Beacon Joe has the same face in all three locations. Keep a sharp eye out in the jail cell, the banquet table, and the alligator swamp!

Constance is the star of the Haunted Mansion story, she haunts the attic after marrying and subsequently doing away with her husbands one by one. In the attic scene, you can see she gains a string of pearls around her neck in each portrait as she gets wealthier after each husband. The hatboxes on the right side across from axe-wielding Constance is where she stores the severed heads of her previous spouses. Also note: After seeing Constance, you then fall out of the attic window, turning backward during the fall, and become a ghost yourself. That's why the caretaker and his dog are so afraid... they see YOU.

Good Ol' Fred Tombstone

Haunted Mansion Queue

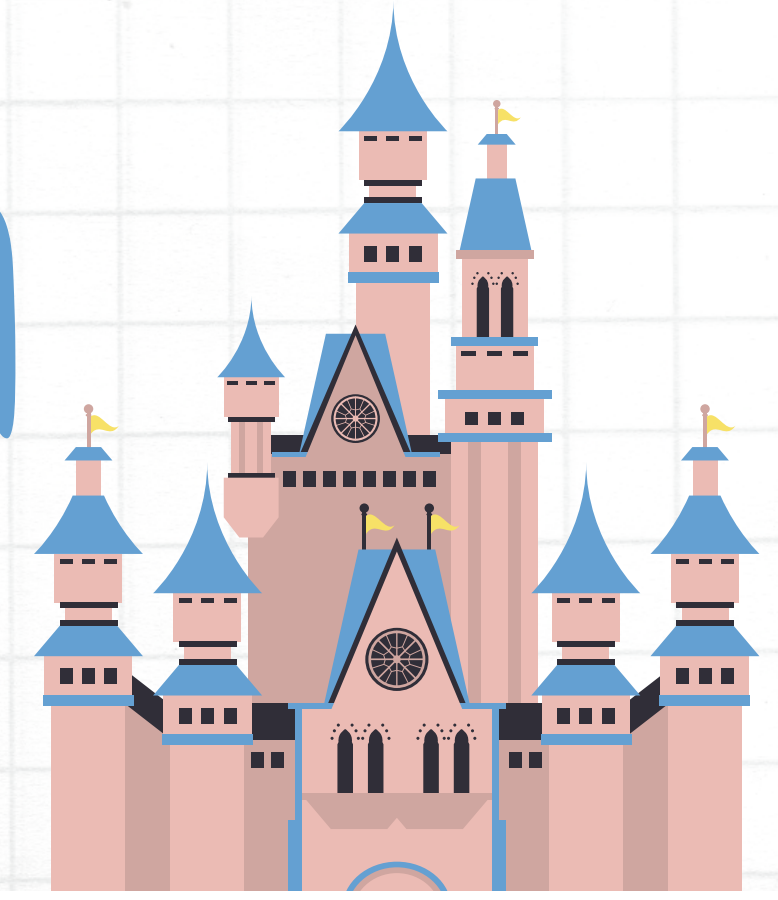

I FOUND IT!

This is referring to Fred Joerger, who was an Imagineer who made many of the original models for Disneyland's attractions, including the steamboat Mark Twain, Main Street, the Matterhorn, and Sleeping Beauty Castle, but that's not all. He became the "resident rock expert" as he created the rock work for the Jungle Cruise and Big Thunder Mountain Railroad, the original waterfall in the Polynesian, and pretty much all of the rock work for the Walt Disney World opening in 1971.

Dearly Departed Mr. Toad

Haunted Mansion Pet Cemetary

I FOUND IT!

Poor Mr. Toad of Mr. Toad's Wild Ride rests in peace here. His ride was replaced by Winnie the Pooh, and in that ride, you can spy our beloved amphibian handing over the deed to the property to Owl.

The birds in the Spring scene are the same ones who whistled along with Mary Poppins, they were repurposed for this 1964 World's Fair attraction after filming wrapped. The father who narrates in this show is voiced by Jean Shepherd, of Christmas Story fame. Uncle Orville is the same voice actor as Bugs Bunny, Mel Blanc. And keep an eye out in the Christmas scene... there are multiple hidden Mickeys in the room!

Bwana Bob Merch Cart

Adventureland

I FOUND IT!

This cart is named after Bob Hope's 1963 movie Call Me Bwana.

The Lockheed Model 12 Electra Junior airplane in the Magic Kingdom in the Jungle Cruise is the actual plane from Casablanca. Imagineers did some research on its serial number and found it was owned by Warner during the time Casablanca was filmed. While most of the movie was shot on a soundstage with a fake airplane, there is a shot of this particular aircraft taking off at the end of the movie. The name on the plane refers to Hathaway Browne, an aviator who is part of the Society of Explorers and Adventurers (S.E.A.).

Balancing Bobcat

Big Thunder Mountain

I FOUND IT!

On one of the lift hills, look down to your left and find a bobcat balanced on top of a cactus escaping some wild pigs. This is a scene from Disney's True Life Adventure documentary film The Living Desert. It was also featured in Mine Train Through Nature's Wonderland, which was a slow-moving train ride in Disneyland that Big Thunder Mountain eventually replaced. (Note: You can see the bobcat more easily from the Walt Disney World Railroad.)
